Overview

Randy Mehrberg has spent decades shaping the business landscape as an in-house leader and a trusted outside advisor. An executive vice president at three major public companies, he understands the full range of issues and pressures his clients face, and how to help them achieve their business imperatives.

Randy's experience solving problems, consummating deals, litigating disputes, and enhancing corporate culture and governance gives him a deep understanding of how to help companies safeguard their business futures.

As Chief Legal Officer at Exelon, General Counsel at Vail Resorts, and President of PSEG Energy Holdings, Randy managed multimillion-dollar budgets, led thousands of employees, and directed growth strategies and corporate development. His broad experience includes high-stakes litigation, mergers and acquisitions, financing, securities, corporate governance, compliance, regulatory affairs, risk management, government relations, restructuring, real estate, tax, environmental, and labor and employment matters. Because he has walked miles in their shoes, clients look to Randy for business-oriented solutions on a wide range of important issues. As a senior advisor to the Mayor of Chicago and the general counsel of a large city agency, Randy understands how government works and excels at achieving positive outcomes.

Randy is a proactive counselor who spots and prepares for issues before they arise. His understanding of the energy sector and other dynamic industries helps him create business and competitive advantages. As his clients' needs continue to evolve, Randy is committed to helping them prepare for a successful future.

Technology in the energy industry is changing much more quickly than public policy, regulations and the law. We thrive on helping position our clients to shape policy for success in the marketplace now and in the future.”
